Public Hearings 18.190 National Grid Pole Petition for Prospect Street (Petition #26534766)

Public Hearings 18.190 National Grid Pole Petition for Prospect Street (Petition #26534766)

Since an abutter was present for the Prospect Street pole petition, Councilor O'Donnell took this petition out of order.

Councilor Dwight moved to open the public hearing for the pole petition on Prospect Street. Councilor LaBarge seconded. The motion passed unanimously 9:0 by voice vote.

National Grid representative Lisa Jasinski explained that the petition is for a pole to be installed across the street from the synagogue in the public way in front of 260 Prospect Street. The supplemental pole is to support the service line that goes into the synagogue parking lot to feed the school. The new stub pole is to provide support for an existing pole that is presently being supported by a tree guy, she confirmed.

Councilor O'Donnell asked if anyone else wished to speak in support or in opposition. No one did.

The DPW has requested two conditions, Councilor O'Donnell stated. He reviewed the conditions as follows:

1. When the new hole for the new pole location has been opened, it shall be inspected by the DPW prior to the pole being placed.
2. If a sewer lateral is disturbed in any way it must be repaired/ relocated by National Grid at the direction of the City Engineer.

Ms. Jasinski confirmed that National Grid is aware of the conditions.

Councilor Dwight moved to close the hearing. Councilor Bidwell seconded. The motion passed unanimously 9:0 by voice vote.

18.175 National Grid/Verizon New England Pole Petition for Hinckley Street

18.175 National Grid/Verizon New England Pole Petition for Hinckley Street (Petition #26535923)

Councilor Dwight moved to open the public hearing at 7:25 p.m. Councilor LaBarge seconded. The motion passed unanimously 9:0 by voice vote.

A pole in the driveway is getting pulled over, Ms. Jasinski advised. The contractor is removing the pole and replacing it with a new one. The customer will eventually be digging a trench to bring the electric service underground to the pole.

There being no public comment, Councilor Klein moved to close the hearing. Councilor LaBarge seconded. The motion passed unanimously 9:0 by voice vote.

18.191 National Grid/Verizon New England Pole Petition for Vernon Street (Petition #26990106)

18.191 National Grid/Verizon New England Pole Petition for Vernon Street (Petition #26990106)

Councilor Bidwell moved to open the public hearing. Councilor Dwight seconded. The motion passed unanimously 9:0 by voice vote.

The subject pole is a mid-span pole, Ms. Jasinski related. National Grid often asks for permission to install these poles when wires are too low. Putting in the pole will raise the wires a little.

There being no questions, Councilor Dwight moved to close the public hearing. Councilor Bidwell seconded. The motion passed unanimously 9:0 by voice vote.

Councilor O'Donnell said he'd like to start with the order just approved in Finance since people were present for that item. He said he would be willing to entertain a motion.

Councilor Dwight asked if he could combine Orders 18.218 and 18.219. There being no objection, Councilor Dwight moved to approve 18.218 and 18.219 as a group in first reading. Councilor Murphy seconded. The motion passed unanimously 9:0 by roll call vote.

Councilor LaBarge moved to approve the order in first reading. Councilor Bidwell seconded. The motion passed unanimously 9:0 by roll call vote.

18.217 An Order to Accept Gift of Ammunition from Walmart - 1st reading

Councilor Murphy moved to put the order on the floor for discussion. Councilor LaBarge seconded.

She is hoping to see this referred to City Services for further discussion and in hopes of having that body consider forwarding the information request to the Mayor so they can get an idea of what the ammunition budget has looked like historically and how the donation might offset future budgets, Councilor Klein said. She moved to refer the order to City Services. Councilor Dwight seconded.

Councilor Carney commented that it wouldn't be unprecedented. The police chief is meeting with the City Services Committee at its first meeting in January, she noted.

Councilor O'Donnell said he sees that as a reasonable course of action. He heard a lot of questions from almost everyone on the City Council this evening.

"This is unprecedented. It is not standard practice to refer gifts to committee," Mayor Narkewicz interjected. He's disappointed that they couldn't treat this as any other gift and have a conversation about it, he said.

Councilor Bidwell said he thinks [referral] is unnecessary. He finds it surprising and disappointing that they are singling out this particular donation for scrutiny when they haven't done it before. He does think they need to be cognizant as the legislative body of the impact to the morale of the department. It is a real thing. He sat in on a committee to interview candidates and, in interviews with eight candidates, the question of how the police are perceived by the community and department morale came up in every interview. Not only is this an issue in exit interviews when people depart, it is also an issue when they go to recruit. He thinks they should be very careful in thinking about the message they are sending to the department and to their officers when in fact it is merely receiving by donation ammunition that would otherwise be used anyways. He thinks it is inappropriate to provide such unusual scrutiny to this particular situation.

This is unusual, though, Councilor Dwight replied. There is a community concern. The fact is they're not speaking about school books or buses, they're talking about lethal systems that they acknowledge and recognize the police must be trained on. There are questions relevant to this; i.e. the concern relative to a large corporation making a donation and benefitting from its largesse while the city doesn't get the full benefit. He has a problem with that and thinks it warrants further discussion.

They are also talking about a department that has the right to carry guns and the authority to shoot and kill citizens. That actually warrants special consideration. He understands and appreciates the point about morale. He thinks it is an enormous responsibility to become a law enforcement officer and that one of those enormous responsibilities is having lethal authority over people. Teachers don't have that, the fire department doesn't have that and the DPW doesn't have that, he noted.

There has been an ongoing debate triggered by a number of items that have come before the council; he for one subscribes to the point that the police department is valuable and that their police department is an excellent one. That said, it goes with the territory. They have sent a number of things to committee that he didn't particularly get excited about that were also unprecedented in the past. He doesn't think this is going to be any worse. That is the nature of this body, it's the nature of governance, and it's the nature of the democratic process. He doesn't have a problem with it going to committee for further analysis.

Councilor LaBarge asked why instead of City Services it couldn't go to the Finance Committee.

The jurisdiction of public safety was taken over by City Services and finance has already voted on it, Councilor O'Donnell reminded.

They are talking about getting an exact quote from Chief Kasper of what the department needs and what it doesn't. To her, that's finance, Councilor LaBarge maintained.

Fair enough, Councilor O'Donnell said. To put it in perspective, discussing something is not a punitive measure; it's their job, he pointed out. He does think it's appropriate for the council to think about the questions that almost every member has posed. As council president, it's his hope to facilitate a conversation about those questions. He doesn't see it as a punitive thing or as being decisive.

His concern is that, when they have a discussion about a particular item; they are not inviting the better conversation, Councilor Nash enjoined. The bigger question is how they as citizens relate to their police department. There is a struggle around that for some citizens in Northampton. There is distrust. They are not going to get at it by talking about these bullets. He thinks that's the route to go at some point. He doesn't think it's going to benefit them to go to committee with this but at the same time they have to recognize there probably is a discussion they should have.

He isn't saying that sending something to committee is unprecedented, Mayor Narkewicz clarified. If the City Council wants to have a public policy discussion about whether the police should be armed or not be armed it seems like the budget process is the appropriate forum. His concern is that this gift item is going to be extrapolated into some larger policy discussion, he elaborated. He is frankly regretting that he agreed to accept the gift and is inclined to withdraw it.

"I can write the script for the hearing," he lamented. Some of the comments he's heard tonight are outrageous; for example, the characterization of their police officers as 'violence workers.' In fact, most of them receive more training in social services and drug intervention.

He has to try and shape this discussion a little bit, Councilor O'Donnell said. Nine members of the council are debating this, and members of the public speak for themselves, whatever they may say. He doesn't want this to turn into a polemic for or against the police. This is about a straightforward acceptance of a gift. If it is referred to committee, the goal is to discuss the gift, not to have a wide-ranging discussion about policing. Maybe some people want that; he does not. His goal is to have a proper process around the issue that has come before them. It is not in any way about whether police should be deprived of their guns, he stressed.

When she suggested that this be referred to city services, her goal was to [facilitate getting more information], Councilor Klein clarified. They don't have a mechanism by which the council today could take a vote on whether to make an information request of the mayor. Since that is not an option and since the vote on the gift would take place before they would have the ability to discuss whether they as a council would be willing to make the request, she was hoping that City Services would grapple with that question and decide whether they would be willing to submit questions to the Mayor for follow-up before the council accepts the gift.

As a point of information, Councilor Carney asked if it is appropriate for a committee to make an information request.

He thinks it's a little bit of a gray area, Councilor O'Donnell said. In reading the charter, it seems to be up to the whole body to make the request. However, the council rules seem to indicate a committee can make a request. He could see the city solicitor weighing in with the opinion that it has to be the full council. They could ask for clarification.

Community Resources has put in an information request in the past so there is certainly precedence for that happening, Councilor Klein noted.

His typical position is to provide information to individuals and committees, Mayor Narkewicz confirmed. However, he believes Charter Section 2-7 is in state law and supersedes council rules. He said he's not sure why councilors couldn't continue the item until they have discussed the information request. They could take a reading tonight, entertain the information request at the next meeting and defer the second reading if additional information is considered necessary, he elaborated.

Councilor Bidwell clarified that he had a specific question, but his question was answered. His question was whether it would be possible to ask the chief to determine which items would be used and then to accept only those items which would be used and the answer was yes. As far as he's concerned, his questions have been asked and answered to his satisfaction. He doesn't think this is the time for the City Services Committee to have a discussion about the role of the police in the community and whether or not the police should be armed.

However, the committee would not be considering the larger question of whether the police should be armed in Northampton, Councilor O'Donnell asserted.

The questions may have been answered, but if the unusable items are separated out, the order will have to be amended, Councilor Sciarra noted.

He has a feeling that people are conflating the public comment with the debate on the council floor, Councilor Dwight observed. The debate as such is a debate on the item that is on the agenda. What he's hearing is that the public comment is what makes people feel most uncomfortable; the emphatic public comment is what gives people a certain disquietude. "We don't control that," he reminded.

[Councilors] shouldn't predicate decisions - good, bad or indifferent - on things that are necessarily said during public comment, he suggested. They are charged as a representative body to make decisions predicated on the information at hand. In that respect, he has absolutely no problem with this going to committee to discuss some of the questions that have been raised, but he would not be in favor of the information request because he has not heard anything that would inspire him to vote in favor of it.

They had the same discussion somewhat in the course of the camera debate with him arguing against referral, he acknowledged, noting that he appreciates the irony of that. Their responsibility is to make reasonable and sound and fair decisions and the fact that there is emotion attached should not scare them away from having the discussion, he concluded.

The inventory she did was not just an empty exercise, it was because she wanted to understand the quantity of lethal munitions they were talking about, Councilor Klein presented. That's also why she wanted to understand what the NPD has in stock now, to know how long it will last and how it would affect the budget in the future. They're not just antagonistic questions to express her anger at policing in the United States or in their city. They are very concrete questions to help her make a reasoned decision on whether this is a gift they should accept. She tried to find an elegant way to make sure some of those questions get answered by referring it to committee.

People end up in policy discussions, philosophical discussions and political discussions from strange places sometimes, she observed. Sometimes it so happens that a question about a donation triggers questions that are philosophical in nature. "That's okay," she opined. They have been told a number of times that this has never happened with a donation or a gift and that [gift acceptance] is just 'de rigueur.' At times, different things come up that trigger questions and she thinks that's appropriate.

She stands by the idea of referral to City Services and hopes that people will see it for what it is and not an attempt on her part to create a referendum on the police department.

Councilor O'Donnell said he's fine supporting the motion to refer this to a City Council committee and has faith that the chair and members will look at the question professionally and in detail.

Council Murphy asked for a roll call, and the motion to refer the order to City Services passed by roll call vote with 6 Yes (Councilors Carney, Dwight, Klein, LaBarge, O'Donnell and Sciarra) and 3 No (Councilors Bidwell, Murphy and Nash).
